Excerpt: . . . 11 Enrons primary goal in Bacchus was to monetize its interest in its pulp and paper trading business so that it could record addi-tional income and cash flow from the sale of this business ven-25 ture on its financial statements. The Fishtail transaction took the first step by purporting to move Enrons pulp and paper trading business to a separate joint venture off Enrons books. Once Fish-tail was complete, Enron took the next step, in Bacchus, to sell its Fishtail investment to an allegedly independent third party so that it could record the cash flow and income on its books. 26 Enron reasoned that its ownership interests in Fishtail quali-fied as a financial asset that could be sold and accounted for 27 under Statement of Financial Accounting Standards ( SFAS ) 140. SFAS 140 has typically been applied to the sale of financial assets such...
