I wanted to talk to God one day, But I could not find Him - I d lost the way. The world was so selfish, cold, and drear; And I whispered sadly, God is not near. All labor seemed toil, each effort vain; The pulse of the universe throbbed with pain; Weary and lonely, I fell asleep. Fearing to wake lest I wake to weep. I woke in the silence of early morn, When another and better self was born. I spoke to my Savior in love, not fear, And my heart made answer: God is here. My hands performed their tasks that day; My feet walked forth the self-same way; But the other self traveled beyond and above, Caroling ever. God is love. I plucked a flower He planted for me; I kissed a baby all winsome and free; I spoke to a lonely, desolate one, And saw the smile of love-light come, I scaled the mountain, and talked with God, While my feet earth-paths of beauty trod...
